Michigan Opera Theatre is a nonprofit cultural organization, whose activities are supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, the National Endowment for the Arts, and other individuals, corporations, and foundations. Michigan Opera Theatre is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
Welcome to the Detroit Opera House, home of the David DiChiera Center for the Performing Arts.

The 2019 Spring Opera Season is supported by a generous grant from General Motors. We are delighted to have you join us as we continue our exploration of great literature-turned-opera with Engelbert Humperdinck’s Hansel and Gretel, based on the Grimm’s fairy tale, and Ricky Ian Gordon and Michael Korie’s The Grapes of Wrath, based on the classic novel by John Steinbeck.

Michigan Opera Theatre has long been committed to artistic excellence, presenting opera and dance performances of the highest caliber to our patrons. But just as important is our commitment to community engagement, providing ongoing initiatives that inspire and enlighten, as well as support the ongoing evolution of the opera art form.

This season we continue to introduce our Page to Stage initiative, a program exploring the original texts and themes of our operas based on literary masterworks, including Alexander Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin and Voltaire’s Candide, in addition to Hansel and Gretel and The Grapes of Wrath. With a combination of study guides, expert lecturers, performances and more, Page to Stage has partnered with area libraries, book stores, book clubs and schools to provide a deeper context to our operas, as part of our commitment to our community. We encourage you to visit our website, www.MichiganOpera.org, to stay up-to-date on events near you. Study guides and additional resources are also available on our website for further study, even after today’s performance has finished.

In recognition of our commitment to increasing the awareness and celebration of the opera and dance art form in Southeast Michigan, MOT is pleased to have been awarded two major grants that (when matched) will enable our organization to expand our programming of opera productions and dance presentations throughout Southeast Michigan. We are the proud recipient of a $1 million grant from the Knight Foundation aimed at presenting new contemporary works, with a focus on presenting non-traditional operas and engaging new audiences. In addition, The William S. Davidson Foundation recently awarded MOT with a $4 million grant to support continued artistic excellence, expand our community and educational outreach, as well as to seed support for necessary facility improvements to our historic Detroit Opera House.

Next season has recently been announced and will include a thrilling opera series, including Wolfgang Mozart’s Don Giovanni, Stephen Sondheim’s Sweeney Todd, Giacomo Puccini’s Gianni Schicchi, Terence Blanchard’s Champion and Ruggero Leoncavallo’s Pagliacci. In addition, our dance series will include the return of the Joffrey Ballet, Dance Theatre of Harlem, celebrating its 50th anniversary, and American Ballet Theatre in performances of Swan Lake, a co-presentation with University Musical Society. It will also include the Detroit Opera House debut of French contemporary ballet company, Malandain Ballet Biarritz, and perennial favorite The Nutcracker with BalletMet.

We invite you to join us for great opera and dance offerings. We are prepared to accept your reservation for next season at the designated subscription booths in the lobby of today’s performance. Thank you for your support!

Regards,

Wayne S. Brown

Welcome to the second half of our 2018-19 opera series, continuing our celebration of great literary works turned opera! Following Alexander Pushkin’s Eugene Onegin and Voltaire’s Candide, we are excited to present Hansel and Gretel, the classic Grimm’s fairytale, and John Steinbeck’s Great American Novel, The Grapes of Wrath. While two completely different stories, they offer a balance between a whimsical fantasy and a harsh reality, one with a happy ending and the other more dire but with a sense of hope.

For more than 200 years, Hansel and Gretel has been an essential part of the fairy tale canon, a story told to children for centuries. While the original fairy tale was published in 1812 and Engelbert Humperdinck’s opera published in 1893, this 21st-century production offers a twist – literally. Director and master puppeteer Basil Twist takes the fantasy to the next level with flying angels, dancing gingerbread and a larger-than-life witch. I am proud to conduct the opera alongside him for a magical work unlike anything you’ve seen before.

With The Grapes of Wrath, the Great American Novel turns into the Great American Opera. Composer Ricky Ian Gordon and librettist Michael Korie take this poignant American story and bring it to life through music. Though set nearly 100 years ago in a completely different part of the country, the Joad family’s journey for survival explores themes of exploitation and injustice as well as compassion and kindness in the worst of times. Set to Gordon’s distinct contemporary American musical style with Korie’s insightful adaptation, the work is a true American opera with everlasting themes that resonate long after the opera has finished.

Looking ahead to next season, we are excited to present a line-up of thrilling operas that will keep you on the edge of your seat. This fall, we present two dark comedies: Mozart’s Don Giovanni and Stephen Sondheim’s Sweeney Todd, productions with the power to make you laugh and squirm at the same time. Our 2020 spring opera series includes Terence Blanchard’s “opera in jazz,” Champion, about American boxer Emile Griffith, and concludes with Leoncavallo’s heart-wrenching tragedy, Pagliacci. The series also includes a community presentation of Puccini’s only comedy Gianni Schicchi, featuring our MOT Studio Artists.

We hope you enjoy today’s performance and encourage you to join us next season for future productions at the Detroit Opera House!

SYNOPSIS

Act 1
In the forest stands the rustic cottage of Peter the broommaker. Hansel and Gretel have been left to themselves by their parents. Gretel puts down the stocking she is knitting to recite a nursery rhyme, which Hansel interrupts with cries of hunger. She shows him a pitcher of milk hidden in the cupboard but will not let him drink it. To keep him happy, she begins to teach him how to dance. Suddenly, the door bursts open and Gertrude, their mother, comes in and angrily reproves them for their horseplay. When Hansel laughs at Gertrude’s punishment, his mother chases him around the hut; the milk pitcher falls to the floor and smashes. Gertrude is furious that dinner is ruined, the broommaking abandoned and Gretel’s stocking left incomplete, so she chases both children into the woods to find some wild strawberries. She puts her head down on the table, grieved by poverty and hunger, just as the happy voice of her husband, Peter, is heard in the distance. He quickly tells his wife that he sold his best price he has ever received. He opens his sack and begins taking out his signature pieces, Britten’s Hollywood Songbook at the Luminato Festival. In concert, opera and recital stages of the world. Russell Braun rightfully claims his "capable of the most powerful explosions as well as the gentlest covered notes” (Toronto Star), baritone Russell Braun rightfully claims his place on the concert, opera and recital stages of the world.

While as darkness falls, they realize that they cannot refill the basket and, worse, that they are lost. Their fears multiply as they imagine animals behind every tree. An old man appears. He scatters gold sand and promises restful sleep. After the Sandman leaves, the two children kneel to say their prayers and fall asleep. The glade is gradually transfigured as angels surround the sleeping forms and keep guard during the night.

Act 2
The Dew Fairy awakens Gretel, who drags the sleepy Hansel to his feet. The mist evaporates, trees vanish, and a candy house appears. Hungry, they begin nibbling at the sweet treats on the house. Then Hansel hears a voice from inside the house. A 12-foot tall ravishing femme fatale of a witch comes out of the house along with a pack of gingerbread children who capture Hansel and Gretel. When they refuse her flattery, she puts a spell on them and claps Hansel in a cage as she also transports us to the inside of her house. Gretel is released to go into the house to set the Witch’s table. In a fit of joy at her prospective banquet, the Witch chases the gingerbread children until she grabs one as an appetizer. Cleverly, Gretel whispers the Witch’s magic words, which break the spell on Hansel; she then asks the Witch to show her how to make the oven work. As the Witch leans in, Hansel and Gretel push her in and slam the door. The oven gets hotter and hotter until it explodes. Hansel and Gretel see that all the gingerbread children have suddenly become real children, still asleep. Hansel again recites the Witch’s spell, and the youngsters spring to life. As Peter and Gertrude rush in and embrace their offspring, a huge gingerbread cake of the Witch is discovered. Everyone joins in giving thanks to the Lord.

Hansel and Gretel:
Puppets Amplify Fantasy of Classic Fairy Tale

BY ERICA HOBBS

It’s a tale as old as time. A young brother and sister are driven from their poverty-stricken family to fend for themselves in the woods, only to be nearly eaten by a witch who lives in a gingerbread house. In the opera, Hansel and Gretel presents the classic Grimm’s fairy tale in Grand Opera style, including a few new characters and set to folk music-inspired themes by composer Engelbert Humperdinck. With Michigan Opera Theatre's production, Hansel and Gretel takes the fantasy to a whole new level - with puppets.

"Whether that be a giant witch or a tree or just a piece of fabric, the craft of puppetry is the magic of making something come alive on stage," said director and master puppeteer Basil Twist.

Twist designed the production, including the puppets, costumes and scenery, keeping his “puppeteer’s touch” everywhere.

With the exception of Hansel and Gretel themselves, he said that nearly everything on stage is made through puppetry or through augmented costume. Those elements include a larger-than-life mother and father and 14 angel marionettes operated by puppeteers from high above the stage.

“Typically, there’s a children’s chorus on stage as the angels,” he said. “But with puppets you can make them fly.”

The most impressive effect of them all, however, may be the opera’s antagonist: The Witch. While performed by a live singer, traditionally a male, the character requires an additional three puppeteers to manage the 15 foot costume. Inside, the singer manages everything from the waist up, including an oversized prosthetic face, a huge headdress and arms twice the length of real arms. Three puppeteers manage the bottom, one to work the legs, one to make the costume rise up and down and one to make the whole thing move around.

“The mechanism and the puppeteers allow the singer to perform as this huge flamboyant, wild witch,” Twist said. “The witch is going to eat the kid, I wanted to really see that.”

Twist created the costume in partnership with the Jim Henson Company to make his original design come to life, who said are the best people to work with in the industry.

“They were excited to do something out there with me, because I tend to do somewhat out there stuff,” he said.

Though based on a children’s story, Twist said Hansel and Gretel is not directed at kids, though it is accessible to them. He said the performance is still a Grand Opera with incredible music, and that everyone can love puppets.

“Puppets should not turn adults off to the shows,” he said. “They should turn adults on to puppetry.”

SYNOPSIS

Setting: Oklahoma, Southwestern United States and California in the mid-1930s

Prologue

The sharecroppers recall the devastation of their native Oklahoma lands, brought about by drought and economic depression.

ACT 1

Having been released early from prison on parole for good behavior, Tom Joad meets up with Jim Casy, a lapsed preacher. When they get to the deserted and destroyed Joad family farm, they discover that the bank has foreclosed on it.

Tom and Jim decide to accompany the family to California, where fruit picking jobs are supposed to be plenty. Al Joad buys an old truck, and the family loads up the few possessions they can take. Connie and Rosasharn dream of a new life and home for Moses, their unborn baby. The next day the Joads bury Grampa, who has died during the night. The family then continues their journey down Route 66.

At a diner, the Joads experience contempt from the truckers and waitresses when they try to buy only the food they can afford, but the diner owner and waitress decide to act out of compassion. Crossing the Mojave, Granma dies during the night, but Ma keeps her death a secret until they get to California. Upon arriving, they are encouraged to see a valley of green. Ma reveals that Granma has died during the crossing. Facing an uncertain future, the family hopes for a better life in California.

ACT 2

The Joads continue on to a Hooverville – a squalid shantytown. Ma struggles to keep the family together. Connie regrets leaving Oklahoma and storms off, never to return. The next day, the Joad men get involved with unscrupulous contractors. A woman is killed in the struggle, and Tom knocks a deputy unconscious, violating parole. Casy volunteers to stay behind and take the blame as the Joads escape to the truck. Noah Joad, feeling himself a burden on the family, goes to the creek and drowns himself.

Newly relocated at a clean, self-policing government camp, the Joads feel like people again. Local farm owners send in agitators to cause a fight during a hoedown so they can close down the camp, but the croppers remain peaceful. Pa persuades the Joads to go to a new farm. They realize that they have been brought in as scabs, triggering a riot outside the camp. Tom meets up with Jim Casy, now an agitator for farm workers’ rights. When Casy is bludgeoned to death by a deputy, Tom kills him and goes into hiding.

The remaining Joads find work picking cotton and taking shelter in a boxcar. During the rainy season, Rosasharn goes into labor, but delivers a stillborn child. Ma asks Uncle John to go bury Moses while Rosasharn recovers to ease her pain; Uncle John instead chooses to cast Moses’ dead body into the river so that everyone can see “the fruits of their blindness.” The raging river has flooded the remaining Joads out of their home. The truck is swept away in the water, and Al is lost when he goes after it. Ma, Pa, Ruthie, Winfield, and a very weak Rosasharn seek refuge in a barn, where they find a boy and his starving father. Ma intuitively knows what Rosasharn must do, and uñers everyone else outside. Rosasharn nourishes the starving man with milk from her breast.

The Grapes of Wrath: Transforming The Great American Novel into The Great American Opera

BY ERICA HOBBS

While historically a European art form, opera has expanded over the years to include works by composers and librettists from around the globe. These operas explore a broader range of human experiences, including American stories ranging from Civil Rights to baseball to life in Appalachia, often sung in English.

In The Grapes of Wrath opera, composed by Ricky Ian Gordon with a libretto by Michael Korie, John Steinbeck’s Great American Novel is turned into the Great American Opera.

In the midst of the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression, the story follows the Joad family on their quest for survival, traveling from drought-ridden Oklahoma to the farms of California. Along with hordes of other migrant workers, the Joads struggle to find work and living wages, constantly facing starvation and injustice.

Korie said the novel explores themes of corporate indifference and the failure of the American dream.

“When people see the opera, they’re bowled over how true it is, even though it took place 90 years ago,” he said. “You realize these themes are cyclical in America. Inequities you believe to be resolved turn out not to be.”

Gordon said the novel is significant, because its themes resonate worldwide, even though it is an American story.

“The story is about people who have very little who are asked to give it up by the people who have a lot. Those who have nothing give their bodies and their kindness and generosity, while those who exploit them live off of their sacrifices,” he said. “The story is current, universal and biblical.”

Korie said The Grapes of Wrath opera offers a compelling perspective on the work, because it is experienced in one sitting.

“It’s an accrual of incidents that are unbroken and supported by constant music, so it grabs hold of you and doesn’t let go,” he said. “When you read a novel you can say, ‘This is too much, I need a rest, I’ll come back to it.’ With the opera, you can’t come in and out of it, you’re swept up in the whirlwind.”

This is not the first adaptation of the novel, which also includes a film in 1940 and a play in 1990. But Korie said the opera is unique in that it can provide more context to the story. He said the novel includes documentary-like background chapters, which provide insight into the larger plight of the farmers outside of the characters. While these chapters are largely omitted from other interpretations, Korie said the opera is able to convey these chapters through use of the chorus, reminiscent of ancient Greek choruses, and inserting the primary characters.

The prologue of the opera, based on the first chapter of the book which provides background information on the drought and the Dust Bowl, is presented by the principal characters mingled in among the chorus. Another example dramatizes the middle Joad brother, Al, buying a lemon of a used truck, reinvented from Steinbeck’s background chapter on how car lot dealers took advantage of desperate migrants.

Novel, opera or otherwise, Gordon said one of the glories and tragedies of The Grapes of Wrath is its utter and extreme resonance at this moment in time.

“People never change. There are always kind and compassionate people and always exploitative people,” he said. “It’s the story of mankind.”

SYNOPSIS

Penny and Pamela read in their playhouse. Banished for painting the windows green, their younger sister Patsy sits outside with her snake, Snively. Pamela sees a green creature enter through a trap door to steal toys and books but, feeling the others will not believe her, says nothing.

The girls’ brothers, Peter and Pollywog, and Earless (the cat) and Yukie (the dog) come to play dress up. Without noticing them the green creature reappears and takes Pollywog and Earless. When Pamela tells them about her earlier encounter, the siblings and Yukie descend through the trap door to save them.

In the tunnel, Penny tells the others to hide while she investigates. She enters a cavern with mushroom houses inhabited by green beings that seem to only say “OG!” Though Yukie tries to protect her, she is captured by Ogs dressed as cowboys and led to jail. On the way she spots Earless in a butcher’s cage but is powerless to help. Reunited with Pollywog at the jail, Penny is amazed to hear the Sheriff speaking English.

Using a tube of green paint, Pamela and Patsy disguise Peter as an Og. He frees Earless but raises suspicion when paint rubs off his hands. During their escape, two Ogs named Hook and Smee assume Peter is Peter Pan and call on their ‘pirates’ to capture the pair. Peter pretends Earless is the crocodile from the fairytale, and the Ogs flee.

At the jail, Pollywog steals the Sheriff’s keys and frees Penny. It becomes clear that the Sheriff’s gun is only a toy and the Ogs are pretending. Penny plays along and captures the Sheriff just as Peter and Earless arrive. Continuing to play, the siblings disguise Peter as the sheriff, write a note to their sisters to be delivered by Earless, and make their escape.

The Ogs intercept Earless and think the note is in code. They pretend to be spies in search of infiltrators but run in fear when Snively escapes from Patsy’s pocket. Delighting in their terror, she runs after the Ogs with Snively in her hand.

In the cavern the Ogs discuss the invaders as Peter, Penny, and Pollywog arrive with their hostage, the Sheriff, and demand to know what is going on.

In the form of a pageant, the Ogs explain that originally the only word they had was “OG”. After discovering a book, they stole more and learned to talk like the characters in the stories. Their only fear is the Snake People who live up the river.

The children explain they must return home, but the Ogs worry they will tell others of their existence. While trying to escape, Peter ‘shoots’ Hook with the toy gun and the Ogs become enraged. Meanwhile more Ogs arrive with news of Snively, who they think is a Snake Person. The siblings tell the Ogs they have a secret weapon to defeat the Snake People but will use it only if they are released and the Ogs stop using the tunnel beneath their playhouse. The Ogs agree, and Patsy returns with Snively hidden. With the crisis averted all agree that, while make-believe can be fun, the real adventure is life itself.

The five resident artists of the Michigan Opera Theatre Studio represent some of the most exciting emerging talent in opera today. Coming to Detroit from all different areas of the country, from September to June these young opera professionals gain valuable experience through myriad performance opportunities in mainstage and community productions and regional outreach presentations. Throughout their one or two-year residency, Studio Artists benefit from advanced individual training and guidance from MOT’s Director of Resident Artist Programs, American tenor, Richard Leech, and Principal Coach/Accompanist, Tessa Hartle, and hone their skills through master classes and instruction from an array of world class professionals, guest artists and coaches.

In its fourth year, supported by a major grant from the William Davidson Foundation, the program serves as a central component of MOT’s enhanced presence in the community through our productions in the Detroit Opera House, community venues and through recitals and special events. An important and unique element of the program is that MOT’s community initiative productions are now selected and mounted specifically for the Studio Program. This season, with Studio Artists filling the leading roles, Leonard Bernstein’s Candide and Gian Carlo Menotti’s Amahl and the Night Visitors represent MOT’s fifth consecutive season of producing opera in community venues.

“The Michigan Opera Theatre Studio serves as a central component of MOT’s enhanced presence in the community. The Studio Artists benefit from the guidance of some of the leading coaches in the opera industry.”

– Wayne S. Brown, President and CEO of Michigan Opera Theatre

Michigan Opera Theatre Studio Overview

Richard Leech
Director of Resident Artist Programs

American tenor Richard Leech is one of the most celebrated tenors of his generation. From the Met to Vienna and Carnegie Hall to the Hollywood Bowl, for more than three decades he made his home on the stages of the world’s great opera houses and symphonies. Also on the voice/opera faculty of Rutgers University though 2018, he recently began as visiting faculty for the University of Michigan. His leadership role with the MOT Studio allows Mr. Leech to utilize all aspects of his broad experience as he oversees the development of some of opera’s most exciting emerging artists and brings their performances to our stage and into our community.
Laura Roelofs – Assistant Concertmaster

Michigan Opera Theatre Assistant Concertmaster Laura Roelofs has been a professional musician for nearly four decades. Her first job was as a resident artist and instructor in Venezuela. She worked with the National Youth Orchestra of Venezuela (now known as El Sistema), where she helped develop a student orchestra in Ciudad Bolivar.

“The founder’s passionate belief in musical training for all, regardless of income or social standing, has continued to resonate with my own idealism,” she said. “I am proud to have played even a miniscule part in its mission.”

Venezuela is only one of the many places Laura has lived. Though born in Philadelphia, her family moved around a lot while she was growing up, and she spent a lot of time living in Washington D.C. She’s been in Michigan playing with MOT since 2005, which she said has brought her many wonderful moments.

“My absolute favorite moment with MOT was the opportunity to perform an on-stage role in Handel’s Giulio Cesare,” she said. “It was a huge challenge to play while moving and interacting in character with a world-class countertenor, but it turned out to be an exhilarating experience.”

Laura holds master’s and doctorate degrees in music from Catholic University in Washington. In addition to working in the MOT Orchestra, Laura is the Associate Professor of Violin and coordinator of the string performance area at Wayne State University. She is an avid gardener and loves animals, cooking, hikes and historical/genealogy research.

John Dorsey - Principal Percussion

Working with Michigan Opera Theatre has been a long-term family affair for John Dorsey, Principal Percussion with the MOT Orchestra. John began performing with the orchestra in 1982. His wife, Dee, followed in his MOT footsteps in 1986, working in the company’s production office, then as a stage manager and now as a supertitle writer and operator. More than three decades later, all four of the couple’s children have been involved with MOT, performing on the Detroit Opera House stage in the Michigan Opera Theatre Children’s Chorus or as supernumeraries. He said working together as a family has been fun, and he has enjoyed seeing the city change over time.

“The best part about performing in Detroit is watching the city come back to life,” he said. “It’s amazing to see the transformation from the time I started at MOT in 1982 until now.”

John, originally from Texas, began playing the drums at age 11. He went on to earn a Bachelor of Music degree in Percussion Performance from the University of St. Thomas in Houston before moving to Michigan to earn his Master of Music degree in Percussion Performance at the University of Michigan. In addition to performing with MOT, he is the Professor of Percussion at Eastern Michigan University and the principal percussionist of the Ann Arbor Symphony and Saginaw Bay orchestras. Outside of performing, John enjoys collecting and restoring vintage percussion instruments.

Greetings from the MOT Volunteer Association.

I have been a music lover for many years and Michigan Opera Theatre is very important to me. Our MOTVA volunteers provide the company a tremendous level of support. We have over 700 members who serve as ushers, tour guides, and Boutique volunteers. Our Divas and Divos provide artist hospitality, and the Opera League and Dance Council members host parties to celebrate events such as opening night performances. Last year our members logged almost 20,000 volunteer hours. Bravi!

If you are hearing about our volunteer programs for the first time and you would be interested in joining us, please give us a call. Volunteering is a great way to meet other interesting and involved patrons. Membership information is located on the MOTVA web page at michiganopera.org/get-involved/volunteers/ or call Colin Knapp at (313) 965-4271 or email cknapp@motopera.org. Colin will be happy to speak with you and connect you with a volunteer opportunity to meet your needs.

I offer my sincere thanks to all of our current volunteers. You are THE BEST!

Sincerely,

Terry Shea, President, MOTVA
